proposals brought before the Board. This same membership was provided guidance (Attachment I) on procedures and mechanisms for the introduction of configurations, systems, equipments and modification proposals into the U-2R program.

Briefly, these initial guidelines assigned specific Configuration Control responsibilities that remain consistent with the general development philosophy expressed in your memorandum (Reference [REDACTED]). It bears reiterating that a "team" concept represent organizational capabilities and materiel resources, regardless of parent command, has been a pronounced characteristic of these working groups.

BASE-LINE CONFIGURATION:

Significant strides have been made in developing the U-2R aircraft base-line configuration. This is now well defined and is furnished for your review by the attachments to this memorandum.

a. U-2R Base-Line Configuration (Attachment II).

b. "Manufacturer's Model Specification, High Altitude Reconnaissance Airplane", Model U-2R, Report No. SP-1125, 28 November 1966, Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, Copy No. 7, (Attachment III).

c. Corollary Planning (Attachment IV).
